

Arriva bus drivers reject pay offer

Strikes set to continue as workers in North West overwhelmingly turn down deal

North West bus drivers will continue with their strikes after pay offer roundly rejected by union members.

More than three-quarters of drivers voted to reject the deal and continue with strike action.

George Patterson, GMB regional organiser, said:

“Working people are facing the worst cost of living crisis for a generation. These drivers are fighting for a fair pay rise to help them through it.

“We need something better from Arriva. Bus drivers need to know that they’ll be able to cover their bills.

“We won’t stop fighting for our members to get the decent pay they deserve.”
