

Starmmer's speech sets out true Labour values can make UK better place

Things can be different, our country will face huge choices in the weeks, months and years to come

Things can be different, our country will face huge choices in the weeks, months and years to come

GMB, Britain's general union, says Keir Starmer's speech set out how true Labour values can and will make the country a better place.

John Phillips, GMB Acting General Secretary, said:

“Keir set out today how true Labour values can and will make our country a better place.

“Fairness, equality, helping every child to reach their potential and valuing our public services, carers, key workers and communities is so important.

“Things can be different, our country will face huge choices in the weeks, months and years to come – these are the values that should be at the heart of we heal our country post-Brexit and heal our economy post covid-19.”

John Phillips, GMB Acting General Secretary, said:

“Keir set out today how true Labour values can and will make our country a better place.

“Fairness, equality, helping every child to reach their potential and valuing our public services, carers, key workers and communities is so important.

“Things can be different, our country will face huge choices in the weeks, months and years to come – these are the values that should be at the heart of we heal our country post-Brexit and heal our economy post covid-19.”

Press office

079859 1525698

press.office@gmb.org.uk

Member requiring help?

Click to contact your local GMB Region

info@gmb.org.uk

