

JCB delivery drivers vote for strike action

Members have rejected a below inflation pay offer and have decided enough is enough

JCB delivery drivers have voted to take strike action in anger at a real terms pay cut.

Dozens of GMB members, employed by delivery giant DHL, voted 96 per cent per cent in favour of industrial action during a formal strike ballot.

The workers, who deliver JCB parts between factories across the UK, will walk out on 23 and 24 May, with more dates to be confirmed.

The dispute stems from bosses trying to impose a 5 per cent pay award, with inflation running at 9 per cent.

Stuart Harrison, GMB Organiser, said:

"GMB is here to support our members in fighting for what they deserve.

"These are skilled drivers who are falling behind with pay rates while cost of living skyrockets.

"The company needs to concentrate on their employees and not sponsorship deals around the world.

"GMB members have rejected a below inflation pay offer and have decided enough is enough."
